LEGGETT ANNOUNCES MEMBERS OF MONTGOMERY COUNTY'S "NIGHTTIME ECONOMY" TASK FORCE

Montgomery County Executive Ike Leggett recently announced his appointments to the County's Nighttime Economy Task Force designed to evaluate and push forward changes to encourage increased nighttime business and social activity for residents, employees, and visitors of all ages and cultural backgrounds. Heather Dlhopolsky, Associate with Linowes and Blocher was named Chair of the Task Force.

The Nighttime Economy Task Force will examine policies, resources and amenities that address Montgomery County's nightlife offerings. Specifically, the task force will address policies that can boost entertainment offerings throughout the County, increase financial prospects of employment and business development while also helping to enhance the sense of community throughout the communities that make up our county.

"This initiative reflects my vision for a 21st century Montgomery that is innovation-driven, transit-friendly, connected, and multi-generational," said Leggett. "A thriving nighttime economy is an opportunity to enhance Montgomery's attractiveness to all generations, businesses and visitors. In its first phase, the focus will be on Bethesda, Silver Spring, Rockville, Germantown, and Wheaton."

Through the Nighttime Economy Task Force, the County will examine the following questions and opportunities:

- What kind of mix of business, entertainment and arts would make a vibrant and attractive urban center?
- How do we attract businesses in defined geographic areas that appeal to multiple generations?
- What are the national trends and models on nighttime economy?
- How do we develop local models to enhance the County's nighttime offerings in its urban centers?
